Wuhoo Timaru

Looking for free fun in Timaru? Find a Wuhoo!

Roselyn Fauth, her husband Chris and her father Geoff Cloake are the brains behind this initiative. This young mum is brimming with ideas to get people, both young and old, off the couch and into the local community to appreciate just what Timaru has to offer. "This creative outlet is bringing our community together, and helping others in ways they never imagined," said Roselyn. "From getting families outside into the fresh air for a modern-day treasure hunt, to giving kids and adults of all ages and abilities a new creative hobby, a sense of belonging and pride in our community." Roselyn stresses that Wuhoo is very much a collaborative venture. She has had wonderful support from the Timaru District Council, the Library, the South Canterbury Museum, the Aigantighe Art gallery and community groups.

The first initiative was TimaruRocks. This group was established in 2017 to help spread the craze which sees participants paint rocks and hide them in public places for others to find, re-hide or keep. They might be found under picnic tables, hiding at the foot of trees in reserves or alongside the sculptures in the garden around the Art Gallery. The community rock boxes, which contain paints and brushes have so far been used by over 2400 residents at South Canterbury primary and secondary schools, retirement homes, community groups, Children's Day, the Rose Festival and the South Canterbury District Health Board.

Another initiative has been the popular Scavenger Hunts at the Timaru Botanic Gardens. Besides giving a brief history of the Botanic Gardens, there is an excellent annotated map and a myriad of fun and interesting activities to do. The informative activity sheets can be picked up from the Fernery in the gardens or at the TDC, Library, Museum, Information Centre or Aigantighe Art Gallery.

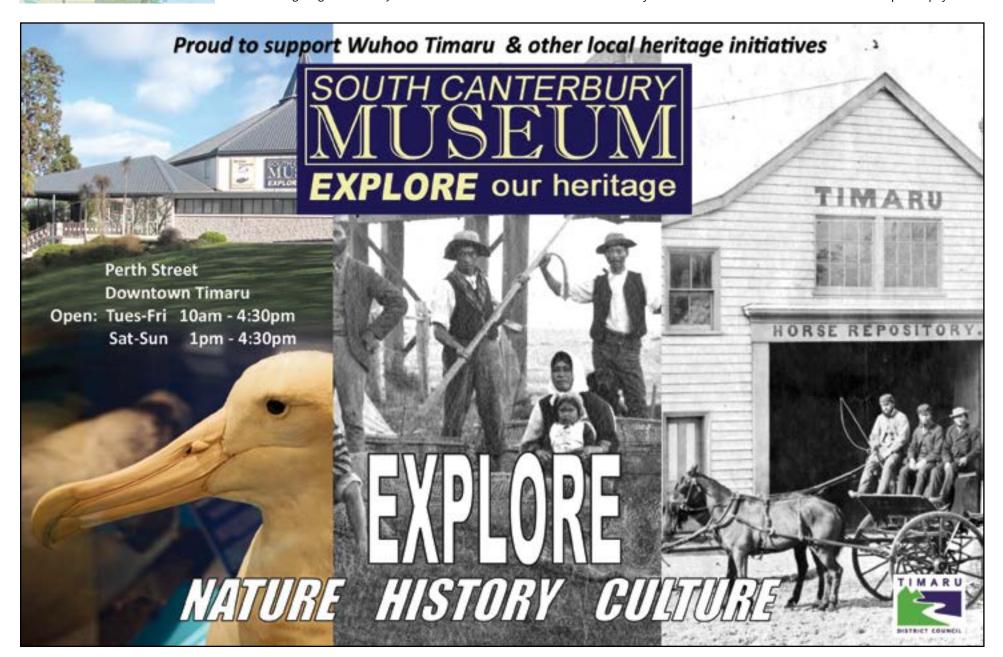

The newest initiative is celebrating art in our environment. The Aigantighe Art Gallery, the Friends of Aigantighe and Wuhoo Timaru have launched a new programme to get artworks out into the community and the environments that inspired them. In December 2018 the first five signs were installed at Caroline Bay and at Patiti Point. They feature artworks from the Aigantighe Art Gallery Permanent Collection that relate to the signs and their surroundings. The signs also include explanatory text and historical images from the South Canterbury Museum's collection, giving the artworks greater context. Examples at Caroline Bay are William Green's The Unemployed, which is a painting of the well-known donkeys that gave rides on Caroline Bay and William Gibb's painting of Timaru Harbour in 1888. Another Green painting entitled The Roadmakers showing horses ploughing a road near the sea, can be found at Patiti Point, along with a painting by John L Higgs, which depicts the scene looking north towards central Timaru and the harbour in 1881 and William Ferrier's Breakwater, Timaru, Running in a Southerly Gale in 1888.

words: Gilly Oppenheim

The next round of signs are nearing completion and it is hoped to have the next three in the ground by October. The Friends of the Aigantighe Art Gallery have commissioned their first artwork to give a contemporary reflection on Timaru's unique past for the Wuhoo signs. The painting has been created by local artist Mike Armstrong. This is a fantastic way to support our local artists.

Roselyn really enjoys the challenge of designing things and the discovery of our history thanks to the book Jubilee History of South Canterbury by Johannes C Anderson. "My goal is to celebrate what our district has to offer, encourage people to use it and to give some free family fun to our locals and visitors". What a wonderful philosophy!

WILD DAY AT THE WETLAND

A wetland beside Saltwater Creek, just south of Timaru on Highway 1, is the focus for the South Canterbury launch event of Conservation Week 2019. Organisers plan a fun day of exploration on the tracks, to get away from traffic and closer to nature. It will be a Wild Day at the Wetland. Saturday 14th September, King Street, Timaru from 10am.

From a starting point on King Street, where Department of Conservation, ARA Polytechnic and Environment Canterbury will have some interactive riverside displays about bats, predators and pests, the route heads across the river bridge and initially towards the coast beside Saltwater Creek, then south again for about 10 minutes. There is a one-hour circular walk around the wetland and beach access, too, for those who wish to venture further. The track on the true left (north) side of Saltwater Creek is currently closed beyond the Rowing Club, however.

Rowers will be on the water in the afternoon, as will be a feathered quarry with the bird-watching guide (at 11am and 1.30pm) and there's an expedition to find small creatures with South Canterbury Museum (11am, 1pm and 2pm). Tree planting begins after 10.30 with Timaru District Council staff and some local Rotarians.

A second display site within the Wetlands, signposted along the tracks, features fish specialists with live fish in tanks and a marine life 'touch tank' brought by University of Otago Aquavan, plus information on invertebrates, lizards, food plants for butterflies and water quality. Water Watch will be explaining water quality monitoring and recruiting volunteers for the spring and summer in Saltwater Creek Catchment.

The Timaru District Council-managed wetland was artificially made about 20 years ago to begin recreating what nature once provided here. One of its landscape designers, Di Lucas, is returning from Christchurch to celebrate the progress made, along with the range of government and voluntary organisations who care for the wetland today. "All are invited to join in the fun, and probably splash in a few puddles - so gumboots or walking shoes are recommended", says Rhys Taylor, facilitator of the Otipua Saltwater Creek Catchment Group. His part time role is supported by Environment Canterbury. "We hope that some of the Saturday visitors will record what plants, birds and invertebrates they see, adding photos and descriptions on the website I-Naturalist, so that we create a shared record of what is there on this 14 September Conservation Week event. It is an invitation to get nosey about local nature, inviting experts to check and confirm online what is being found and posted by amateurs." The website is www.inaturalist.nz.

TORNADO TUCKER'S Muay Thai Journey

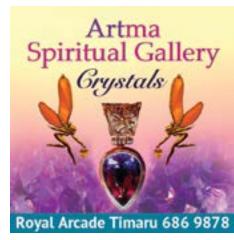

a Muay Thai fighter. This is a full-contact combat sport which originates from Thailand. This discipline is known as the "art of eight limbs" as it is characterized by the combined use of fists, elbows, knees, and shins. It isn't a sport for the faint-hearted, as the training is heavy and getting black eyes and bruised shins is just part of the sport. Your only protection from injury is a mouth guard and boxing gloves, so you must always turn up to a fight prepared. It is imperative to be fit, so Kaitlyn trains ten or twelve times a week, doing cardio at the gym or the pool and practising skills, techniques and next year. Her motivation for learning this sport was to get fitter, challenge herself, and to get pushed outside her comfort zone. Kaitlyn is passionate about helping other girls build strength and confidence. She runs a ladies only class and is keen to see more females take part, so this September it will be free to anyone keen to try it out. Local dog biscuits made from real meat

At Coupland's, our recipe for success is a

We use the best locally sourced ingredients available to create a dog biscuit that gives your best friend everything they need. There are no preservatives or artificial flavours - just good ingredients.

Living in South Canterbury we are surrounded by some of the best natural food ingredients in the world. Using these ingredients, our biscuits are baked in our automated, purpose-built baking oven. Each nutritionally-formulated batch is quality checked before being bagged up for sale at our drive-through retail store on High Street, Timaru, Freshness is guaranteed as our biscuits are baked and sold within a couple of days.

Our real point of difference is that our biscuits are made with real meat. The energy content means your dog needs less biscuits at each meal. We liken the quality of our biscuits to eating a Sunday Roast rather than a fast-food alternative.

Here at Coupland's we manufacture two types of dog biscuit - one for the working farm dog, the other to suit your family dog. Hence the names – Working Dog and Family Dog biscuits.

Coupland's Animal Foods is a secondgeneration family owned business. Established in 1991, we are one of New Zealand's longest serving animal feed companies. Polly's Vatchwork

Polly's Patchwork has recently opened right beside its sister store, Mint, in Fairlie. Rebecca Kerr owns both businesses. "You may be asking where the name Polly came from? Years back dad called me Polly as my nick name". When the original old Mint building was demolished to upgrade the area, Rebecca immediately saw the potential, and so the idea for a specialist patchwork store was born. This little store is light and airy with its products attractively displayed.

Rebecca has always been keen on patchwork and Polly's Patchwork has a good selection of fabrics, cottons, buttons, patterns, DMC embroidery threads, tapestries and more for the keen sewer. Rebecca said her online sales are also proving popular. In the future she would like to run patchwork classes.

Products available will appeal to all age groups and there are some quirky gifts, such as the needle mender magnets and the Mt Dobson animals on skis. Embroidery books are also available as well as a small jewellery selection. Why don't you come in and browse to get some ideas for that needlework masterpiece, be it a patchwork quilt, a bag, a wall hanging or an item of clothing? You might surprise yourself!

Polly's Patchwork is open every day from 10.00am until 4.00pm and is found at 72 Main Street, Fairlie. Products can also be viewed on Facebook and our website www.pollyspatchwork.co.nz

I'm now 6 years after being your Mayor more skilled, knowledgeable and nationally connected than I was before. I am ready to hit the ground running and if you would like me to, lead again a District that I love and believe in

If elected name 1 short and 1 long term goal as mayor that you hope to accomplish in office?

Short Term: Review and prioritise all capital projects so they can be completed on time and within budget.

Long Term: "A District that is affordable, dynamic, colourful, arty and fun, with caring people who respect the environment and each other, where innovation is embraced, businesses thrive and talent wants to live

If elected what 3 steps would you take to put our District on a firmer financial footing?

- A steely eye on the Rates as I am very concerned at the forecasted 7% increase on our Rates for the next 2 years and a strong overview of debt levels.
- Better Council organisational performance and decision making.
- · Being more innovative in finding other funding sources rather than just relying on Rates eg. Public / Private partnerships and Central Govt.

NIGEL BOWEN

What is your personal/professional/government experience and how does this make you the most qualified to serve as mayor?

For the past 14 years we've run The Speight's Ale House restaurant, The Landing Service Conference Centre and, more recently, Street Food Kitchen.

I have been a Timaru District Councillor for 2 years in roles in Community Development and Audit and

I'm honoured to have served the community as a Timaru councillor, Chairperson of the Timaru CBD Group, board member on The South Island Master Games and Chairperson of South Canterbury Aoraki Football

I'll be even more honoured to serve as your Mayor.

If elected name 1 short and 1 long term goal as mayor that you hope to accomplish in office?

My short-term goal is simply having a conversation with the community on what they want for their district and what they want their future district to look like.

This will involve the governance team being proactive in reaching out and engaging with all our stakeholder groups

My long term or medium goal is to push for CBD revitalisation and further Caroline Bay

These tie together as it is key that our CBD has good linkage to one of our biggest assets. This again requires a conversation with the community on what they want in their CBDs in Timaru, Geraldine, Temuka and Pleasant Point to look like

We have a real opportunity to have a fresh modern revitalised district that is user friendly for people of all ages.

If elected what 3 steps would you take to put our district on a firmer financial footing?

- Currently the dividend paid from TDHL is used by Council to soften Rates by just over $100 per household per annum.
- A more financially prudent way of using this money could be to directly pay down debt or borrow less for key infrastructure renewals.
- There would need to be a stepped approach out of this practice to have less effect for those on fixed incomes.

With any business there needs to be clear leadership from the top, that leads by example, inspires a team dynamic and respects individual's

This was my focus over the 40 years that I owned and managed Gordon Handy Machinery. I worked hard to establish an empowered management team and a strong governance structure.

While people may question the fact I am not currently involved in Council, it enables me to offer a fresh approach – untainted by past issues, relationships and agendas. My governance experience within numerous organisations provides me with the skills and personal understanding of the needs across our community.

Now that I am not immersed in running a full time business, I have the time, energy, and dedication to help our region grow and thrive

If elected name 1 short and 1 long term goal as mayor that you hope to accomplish in office.

We need to make it easier to do business – to motivate investment and stimulate opportunities

With this in mind my short term goal is to ensure that we have the core services and infrastructure in place to make our region resilient and fit for the

Longer term, we need to focus on attracting younger rate payers to our district. This could include driving industrial programmes to attract young people into the workforce, to releasing land

If elected what 3 steps would you take to put our district on a firmer financial footing?

- 1. An action-based, long term approach to repairs and maintenance. Our infrastructure is old. We must start replacing it instead of wasting money and 'patching' until the next election.
- 2. Greater efficiency and collaboration. An information funnel approach enables more open collaboration and diverse viewpoints by reducing Council committees and utilising existing skills within our community.

3. A more diverse rate payer base.

Attracting young families with good employment opportunities, affordable housing, and safe facilities is vital to the on-going development and success of our region.

Saying Goodbye is Important in New Zealand are choosing a no-frills direct cremation for their loved one, or following their loved ones wishes for this South Canterbury Funerals see first-hand how important saying goodbye is, so have created a space in their new premises at 2 Latter Street, Timaru, for families opting to mark the occasion with a simple and dignified service to say goodbye, while avoiding the extra expense of a full funeral

Gary Burtenshaw, of South Canterbury Funerals, says of their decision to provide this modern, customised space and the trend towards direct cremations: "Down the track, families can find they have not grieved properly and really struggle. A funeral service, even a small private family gathering, often starts the grieving process. The Timaru Home & Lifestyle Show

September's The Timaru Home and Lifestyle Show has a focus on sustainable living, and is a must see event for home and lifestyle enthusiasts.

The three-day show will be at the Southern Trust Events Centre with exhibitors from South Canterbury and across New Zealand and features the latest trends and innovations for sustainable homes and living as well as a chance to meet special guest, Annabel Coulter, inaugural winner of the television show, The Great Kiwi Bake off.

Event organiser, Chris Thomas, says "The show is for all new and existing homeowners, those who want to improve their home, add real value, carry out renovations, and those who are thinking about redecorating, installing new appliances, or even upgrading their outdoor facilities.

A key theme for the show this year is sustainability, so it is particularly useful for those who are interested in a more sustainable lifestyle; offering products and services that can help reduce our impact on the environment.

This ranges from simple concepts like recycling and reusing products, through to the trends for electric vehicles and bikes, generating power and growing vour own food."

Discover new trends and innovations, talk to the experts, find inspiring ideas and take advantage of exclusive show specials for building, renovating, decorating and landscaping for every taste and budget at the three day event held on September 13, 14 and 15.

Safer vehicle choices are affordable

It is shockingly common that people have a very limited understanding of safer car choices. Too many people are still selecting cars based on its performance alone.

If people realise how many crashes happen on our roads, they would review their choices. As our roads become increasingly busy, and the road users are more diverse, the risk increases

Small cars are over represented in fatal or serious injury crashes. We could argue that everyone should be alert when travelling, but that is unfortunately not reality. As humans, we are vulnerable because there are too many things that affect our concentration and abilities.

Research that Mackie Consultants had done for the AA Research Foundation a few years ago, shows that a small portion of crashes actually happen because of "reckless" driver behaviour. Their research showed that the majority of crashes happened when drivers were driving normally.

One of the actions the World Health Organisation recommends is that we should work towards operating a safer fleet. This is also one of the proposed actions for the latest New Zealand road safety strategy.

We know that crashes will happen. Our challenge is to manage the outcomes of crashes, so they do not end in fatal or serious injuries.

"Your choice of car can make all the difference if you are involved in a crash. Our Used Car Safety Ratings provide you with a crash safety rating that shows how well each vehicle protects its driver from death or serious injury in a

So if you are thinking of buying a car, check out its safety rating. There are lots of safe, less expensive cars to choose from. In fact, some of the most affordable used cars are among the safest. A vehicle with a 5-star rating is the safest option.

Some vehicles can significantly reduce your chance of being seriously injured in a crash, and even can help avoid a crash altogether. Your vehicle also needs to offer good protection to other road users, such as people walking and cycling, if it collides with them, Rightcar website (www.rightcar. govt.nz/used-car-safety-ratings.html).

"When using a vehicle for work, we need to consider the vehicle an extension of the workplace. Just as we provide employees with a safe workspace in the office, factory, or worksite, we must also provide them with a safe vehicle." Australian New Car Assessment Programme (www.ancap.com.au/

In New Zealand, the number of work place related crashes make up twenty five percent of all crashes.

Some fleet supply companies like Fleet Partners offer late model 5-star rated vehicles fit for purpose with a full maintenance plan for under $300 per month. This cost is fully tax deductible and for that, your staff enjoy the protection they deserve.

In the same manner business owners actually contribute to making our NZ fleet safer, because after these vehicles are withdrawn from leases, they are sold to the public. At 14-years, NZ has the oldest fleet in developed countries and our high fatality and serious injury rate reflects that. The safety of your staff on the road is in your hands.

Kate Le Leivre

Kate is Autoworld Timaru's Parts Manager and has been part of the family for 3 years.

Q. Why are genuine parts important for your vehicle? Genuine parts are crafted by the vehicle's manufacturer and strenuously tested and developed to meet safety, high quality and performance standards.

When your vehicle requires replacement parts due to a crash or servicing or just routine maintenance, it's advisable that genuine parts are fitted. Genuine parts are new and warranted/approved by your vehicle's manufacturer.

Non-genuine parts might look like the real thing, but they have not been made, selected or approved by the maker of your car. They haven't been through as many thorough tests as a genuine component will have been by the manufacturer.

Non-genuine parts can't necessarily promise the same quality and safety points that come with a genuine part but there may be times when aftermarket parts are required due to the manufacturer no longer being able to supply genuine parts due to the vehicle age and/or demand.

Q. What are the benefits of using genuine parts?

Easier to choose your part: If you go to the parts counter at a dealership and ask for any part, you will usually get one type. You don't have to worry about assessing the quality of different brands and prices.

Greater assurance of quality: The genuine part should work exactly as the one you are replacing. It is what the vehicle was manufactured with and provides peace of mind in its familiarity and performance.

Comes with a warranty: Genuine parts come with a Factory backed warranty. Usually this is based on the timeframe and mileage the part has done after fitment. If within the required constraints, the distributor will assist with replacement.

Autoworld Timaru are suppliers of Genuine parts for various models including Kia, VW, Skoda and Nissan. Make us your first point of call for any of your parts requirements.

Online Marketing

Now is the perfect time to plan your online marketing strategy for Christmas and we are here to help. Nearly all can be planned and scheduled now so sit back and enjoy your stress-free marketing countdown by simply pre-planning it.

Promotions

December is the month where most offers exist in almost all sectors. In order to penetrate the market you need to think about some online promotions that help you to attract your customers and encourage purchase. Incentives to up-sell like buy X get Y discounted or buy X & Y then get Z free or use code XXX and receive free freight but limit the time so it is a now or never offer. Add these onto a Master Plan calendar.

Social Media

As your bricks and mortar shop will be full of Christmas decorations, make sure your website emanates the Christmas spirit as well, the visual identity is the main contact that customers have with your brand. So prepare your images for website and schedule your social networks posts with details alluding to Christmas. For this you can create special Christmas icons, adapt your logo, designed images, add effects, etc. and schedule dates to post & boost fresh content as well as the planned incentive deals. Re-targeting attractive incentives adverts linking directly to products to your specific targeted market. Make it enjoyable and easy to buy with direct links to products - don't have them searching everywhere for the very products you just put in front of them on Social Media.

Email Campaigns

Newsletter campaigns can be very effective as they are your existing customers from the beginning but remember that the messages must be short, clear and very creative! So create and schedule weekly newsletter campaigns throughout the couple of months to announce Christmas promotions and offers to them first - again with time limits on offers.

If you need help no worries just give us a call for a free half hour consult.

Jamie knows that nelping clients with their pets starts with providing a good understanding of health care issues and treatment options.

Q. What is the fastest way to get rid of fleas on my cat or dog? Use a high quality flea prevention, such as Advantage or Bravecto. Both have a high efficacy rate and Bravecto even lasts up to 3 months in 1 dose. This makes it easier on you and your pet as well as tying in well with worm preventions. With the changes in the weather that we have been experiencing, flea problems are expected to continue to be more of a problem. Unfortunately while home remedies might appear to work, some can cause harmful effects on your pets and most only repel the fleas while in small numbers. Vet supplied products will always be the best to use.

Q. How often do I have to bring my cat/dog in for its vaccinations? For most adult cats and dogs, the typical vaccines are suitable for 3 years. Depending on the risk factors and other outside influences, it may be recommended that more frequent dosing is required eg. Cats going into catteries need to have their vaccine within the last year. If your dog is going into kennels, they will need to have the Kennel Cough vaccine up to date which is a yearly dosing. This is also highly recommended for dogs that have regular contact with foreign dogs. Puppies have a different regime for vaccinations and should be enquired from the vet.

Q. What age can I get my pet microchipped? If it's an old cat/dog do I still get it microchipped?

Pets can be microchipped at any age, but due to the size of puppies, it is often left till their last puppy vaccinations around 12 weeks. It is never too old for your pet to be microchipped and is necessary for council registration. In NZ we have an organisation NZCAR that oversees a nationwide database for microchipped pets This is a one-off fee of $15. All councils, vets, registered animal rescue organisations have access to it.

Q. What does it mean if my pet is drinking heaps of water? Drinking heaps of water is often a tell-tale sign of your pet needing to see the vet. It can mean that the kidneys are working too hard, kidney disease is beginning to occur, or that your pet is dehydrated. Call the vet when you pet is drinking heaps of water consistently.

Q. What to consider when selling/purchasing?

This can be a very stressful experience and a decision that you should consider carefully before embarking upon, also it can be an exciting time!

The right choice or real estate agent and financial advisor can have a big impact on the whole process, working with a company that can incorporate both from the start will help you to have this process speed up and can make for a smooth transaction.

Q. Why Mike Pero Real Estate?

When you decide it is time to sell your home, you need to do research and pick the best agency to represent you and your property. Recommendations from friends, family and your solicitor are often the best advice givers. Our team at Mike Pero are helpful and friendly, we are easy to talk to and to discuss your options with.

Q. Help I am overweight and just starting out but find it all too complicated.

Make it simple; just remember "The Power of Eight": 8 hours sleep, 8 coloured vegetables, 8 glasses of chemical-free water, and 8,000 foot strikes a day. Oh, and cut back on sugar - one glass of wine is equal in calories to a cheeseburger! A high sugar / carbohydrate diet causes wear and tear on your DNA making you older, faster!

Q. I do aerobics and cycle, isn't that enough"?

Our aim is to give you the tools for fantastic ageing where you will be fit in all dimensions. Aerobic exercise is great for cardiovascular fitness, but it won't make you strong, or improve your metabolic rate. We see marathon runners with trim legs, but flabby, underdeveloped upper bodies and thinning bones.

The worst possible scenario would be to live to an old age only to find yourself too feeble to remain independent. Strength training kick-starts fat burning. In fact, top athletes will always include hard resistance training to improve their performance and prevent iniuries.

Q. I am too busy to exercise and eat well.

Keeping your body lean, fit and functional is no job for the uninformed or careless. Doing it well requires an understanding of the body, good eating practices and exercise habits. The results are immeasurable - more energy to get things done, happier moods, radiant health, agelessness, a disease-free body and high achievement. Peter Sprague

Peter has returned to South Canterbury Toyota as a senior tech this year and has 30 years' experience in the automotive industry.

Why do I need to service my car so often?

Many car owners think dealers want to overservice your vehicle to make more money. A 12-month interval seems too soon especially if you've only driven 5,000kms since the last service. But it's the manufacturer who recommends these intervals and for good reason. Without regular intervals it's more likely your vehicle will develop small defects which can cause bigger costs down the track. Oil deteriorates not only through use, but also over time and after 12 months no longer provides optimum protection for your motor which increases the risk of problems later on. The same applies for filters and other fluids.

Most of us these days have busy lifestyles, and many find the financial burden a good reason to skip a service. But this can cost you more time and money down the track.

How much do you rely on your vehicle in your everyday lives? It amazing that so many of us just expect our cars to never break down but won't ensure it's maintained to provide that reliability especially when most family's lifestyles these days are dependent on the family car or SUV.

In addition, almost every manufacturer has its own dedicated electronic test equipment that is specific to its range of vehicles. Such tools are needed to diagnose the car's computer, find intermittent faults and to perform computer software upgrades to overcome specific issues. Such equipment is very expensive and available only to dealers.

South American Splendour words: Gilly Oppenheim

Walking in the Amazon rainforest, climbing up to the magnificent Machu Picchu ruins, bargaining for beautiful alpaca knitwear with colourful Andean Indians, traversing the torrents of the Iguazu Falls, swimming on Copacabana beach and dancing the samba in Rio and the tango in Buenos Aires. Just some of the highlights of a recent three week trip to four South American countries.

We flew from Lima to Puerto Maldonado, a rather ramshackle little town and the capital of biodiversity in Peru. From here we were ferried by motorised boat to a stunning eco-lodge on a tributary of the Amazon the Madre de Dios. Our accommodation was rustic chalets on stilts because of flooding, nestled in lush tropical gardens with hammocks overlooking the river and cheeky little spider monkeys and colourful birdlife abounding. We walked in the jungle with an excellent nterpretive Quechua Indian guide. He had a wonderful knowledge of the flora and fauna and the giant ficus trees with buttress roots weren't unlike our huge kauri trees In Northland.

Our next stop was Cusco in the Sacred Valley. It is a ovely old Inca town at 3,400 metres and is well-known for its archaeological remains and Spanish colonial architecture. The central plaza had lovely arcades, carved wooden balconies, Inca wall ruins and the most gigantic cathedral, which was very ornate and full of treasures – canvas oil paintings, much gold and silver and beautiful wooden carvings. From here we also visited Sagsaywaman (pronounced 'sexy woman'!) which had been an Inca fortress and the ancient town of Ollantaytambo, which was built by the Incas in 1537 and was a wonderful archaeological complex.

We then took the Vistadrome train through spectacular scenery along the Urubamba River valley to Aguas Caliente at the foot of Machu Picchu for what proved to be the highlight of this trip. The queues were horrendous as 7,000 tourists a day visit the ruins in the high season and 500 hikers walk the Inca Trail which takes 4-5 days. On Sundays local Peruvians can visit the ruins for free, and it was Sunday, so it was busy! Machu Picchu means 'old mountain' and these ruins, built in 1438 lay undiscovered by the Spaniards for centuries, until Hiram Bingham found them in 1911. They are an extraordinary example of architecture and engineering. About 60 % are original and 40% have been restored. Very steep forested hillsides have a sheer drop into the valley below and towering peaks are all around. It really is a magical place and quite spiritual. I was very glad of my altitude gym training and I coped well with the altitude apart from a slight headache. Chewing on coca leaves and drinking coca tea also helped!

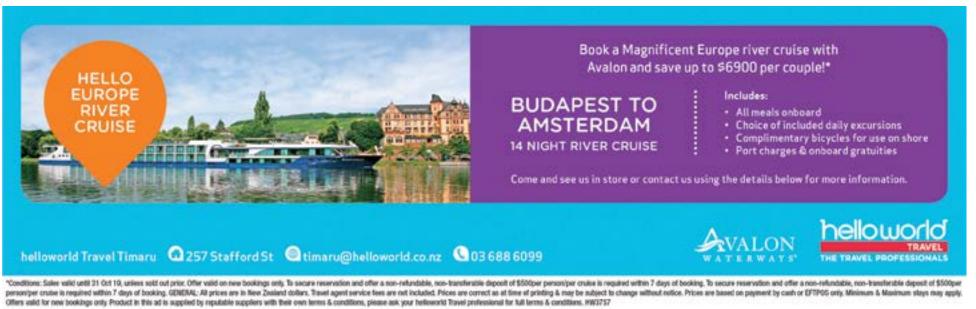

Our next adventure was a ten hour train trip through quintessential Andean landscapes from Cusco to Puno in a lovely old 1920s-style Pullman train which had an open-air observation carriage at the rear. We climbed to the dizzying height of 4321 metres at La Raya (Mt Cook is 3724 metres). The landscape was not unlike our Mackenzie country with snow-capped peaks surrounding the flat Altiplano and acres of brown tussocks. The difference was the typical farming communities with crumbling adobe buildings and small herds of llamas, sheep and cattle, some in little stone-walled enclosures. Puno lies on the shores of Lake Titicaca, reputedly one of the most traditional and conservative places in South America, and also one of the most touristy!

Bolivia is the poorest, highest and most undiscovered of all the Latin American republics. It is country which never fails to surprise – where the women wear bowler hats, where coca leaves are the staple diet, where a navy is maintained in a landlocked country without a sea, and where dried llama foetuses are sold in the witches

Lake Titicaca is the world's highest navigable lake with 60% in Peru and 40% in Bolivia. It has over a hundred floating manmade islands made of reeds, on which 3,000 people live in communities and depend on the lake for their living – mostly fishing and handicrafts. These islands are anchored by logs and are connected to each other by ropes. If there is a dispute in a community, they can simply cut you free and you have to anchor

La Paz is the world's highest capital city. It spans a huge canyon and is a real mix of old and new. Shacks stand alongside modern skyscrapers, the streets are cobbled, steep and narrow and the valley has been linked by a modern gondola system since 2014.

After Bolivia, we flew across the continent to the vibrant, cosmopolitan city of Rio de Janeiro in Brazil. Our hotel was right on the famous Copacabana Beach with its mosaic pavements (as in Portugal), hawkers, lime scooters (yellow here) and beach bars. The population is a heterogeneous mix of Portuguese, native

Brazilians and slaves of African descent, so beautiful people of all shades from brown to jet black. Rio is nestled between the mountains and the sea and the huge statue of Christ the Redeemer towers over the city and is visible from everywhere. A visit to the Sambadrome was a highlight. The Rio Carnival is held every year before Lent, nobody works and schools are closed. Authentic Carnival happens on the streets but the Sambadrome shows it to the world. Elaborate costumes and floats are made, there is much singing, dancing and drinking, and apparently an explosion of babies nine months after the Carnival!!

Our next stop was the spectacular Iguazu Falls. Iguazu means 'big water' and they are certainly that - 275 falls stretching over a frontage of 2.7 kilometres, cascading over a 90 metre precipice at a rate of 1500 cubic metres per second. 20% are in Brazil and the other 80% in Argentina and we viewed them from both sides. They are stunningly breath - taking.

Our final stop was the lovely city of Buenos Aires in Argentina. It is a modern cosmopolitan city with a strong European influence - beautiful architecture, wide tree - lined streets and lots of green spaces. The Plaza de Mayo is the histroric heart of the city and we also visited the huge San Telmo Sunday Market, Eva Peron's grave on the Recoleta cemetery, the exclusive new neighbourhood of Puerto Madero (which was formerly port warehouses but now plush high rise offices, apartments and top restaurants), and the colourful La Boca area. The Argentinians are very spontaneous, often seen tangoing in the streets. Their steaks are the biggest I've ever seen and their red Malbec wine is divine. Our final night was spent at La Ventana – a superb tango show with a tribute to Eva Peron.
